Fats, Oils & Grease (FOG)

FOG clogs occur when grease is washed into the plumbing system, usually through the kitchen sink, and gets stuck inside pipes once it cools and solidifies.

Even small amounts of FOG stick to sewer pipes and accumulate over time, restricting or blocking the flow of sewage. A sewer backup can overflow onto streets and into homes, creating public health hazards, and damaging properties and the environment.

- Cooking Oils & Shortening
- Meat Fats & Juices
- Dairy Products
- Butter & Margarine
- Salad Dressings, Sauces, & Marinades

You can make a difference by properly disposing of FOG. See disposal information on reverse side.

Do's

- Scrape greasy pans and dishes, into the trash before washing.
- Use sink strainers to catch food items & empty into the trash.
- Pour FOG into a sealable container, such as a coffee can. Dispose of full containers according to chart on reverse side.

Don'ts

- Don't put FOG down the drain.
- Don't use your garbage disposal to wash fatty/greasy foods away. Food scraps can clog sewer pipes – even after the garbage disposal.
- Don't use grease dissolver additives. They only pass grease down the line and cause problems in other areas.

Benefits

Your efforts with proper disposal will help:

- Prevent disruptions to your sewer service
- Prevent smelly, costly sewer backups
- Prevent damage to the environment
- Help keep your sewer costs down
